

The School Perspective

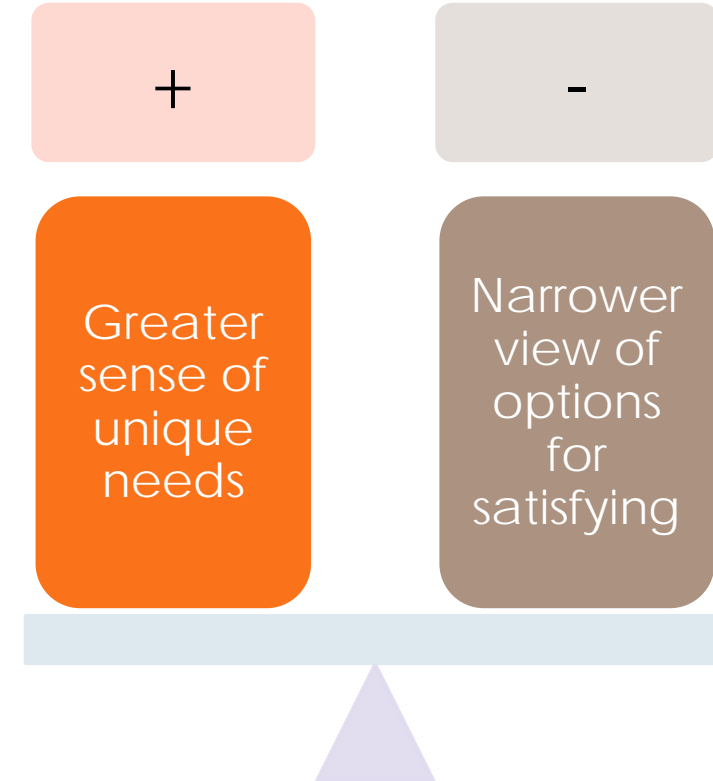

TRANSLATING IT STRATEGIC INITIATIVES/GUIDING-PRINCIPLES TO LOCAL ACTION

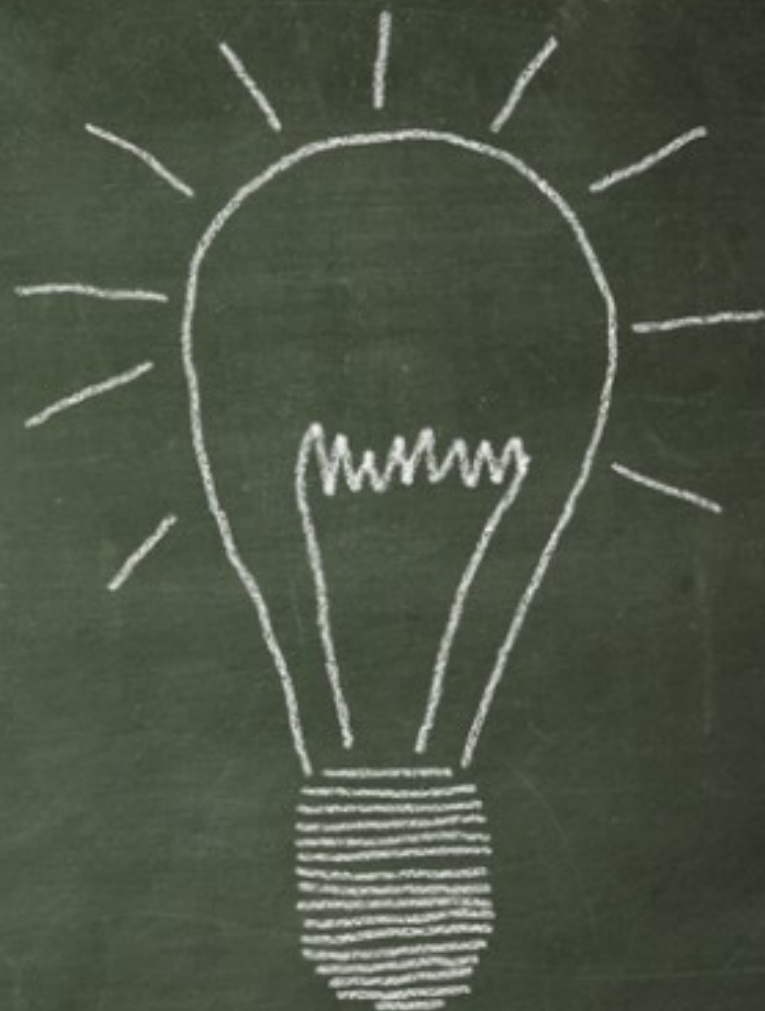

My Objective

- ▶ Share my observations from the School of Human Ecology
- ▶ Ask you to consider how your schools are the same or different

The Benefit and Challenge of Local

- ▶ Belief that centralized decision-making cannot adequately represent local needs.

Some Challenges that Separate

- ▶ Zero awareness or understanding of guiding principles
- ▶ Not sure how global initiatives benefit them (and not sure how to find out)
- ▶ Little time or inclination to learn unless it meets a specific need they have

How do you connect the dots between local needs and global initiatives/services under these circumstances?

How is your/your school's experience the same or different?

What is our role, if any, in bringing that perspective to this forum?
